About this toolkit

A practical campaign members can adapt and share

Choose Co-op for the Holidays is a public-facing campaign built around Canada Co-op's Find a Co-op map. It promotes co-operatives in consumer choices, raises visibility of co-operatives, and gives Canadians a practical reason to use the map during a season when they are already buying gifts, planning meals, booking travel and choosing services.

How to use

This toolkit helps Canada Co-op members connect their own products, services, locations, networks and resources to the campaign. Use it to support your holiday communications, including newsletters, website content, social media, board updates, employee communications and member or stakeholder outreach. It includes:

- Campaign overview and key messages — the campaign idea and ready-to-use messages for promoting Find a Co-op.
- Social media content — 10 ready-to-customize captions: one Facebook post and one LinkedIn post for each of the five campaign themes, including suggested hashtags.
- Campaign themes — five adaptable ways to connect your organization, members, products, services, experiences or resources to the holiday campaign.
- Visual direction — a suggested visual concept for each theme to guide the use of Canada Co-op campaign graphics or your own approved images.
- Activation tools — the Co-op Holiday Checklist, suggested timing, a publishing checklist and simple measures of success.

Suggested timing

1. Nov 23 – 29: Launch and holiday discovery

Introduce the campaign and encourage your audience to consider co-operative options before completing their Black Friday and Cyber Monday shopping.

- Publish one campaign launch post followed by a product, gift or experience post during the Black Friday weekend.

2. Nov 30 – Dec 13: Holiday choices and stories

Build awareness by showing the variety of ways people can choose co-op. Move beyond general campaign messaging and highlight specific products, services, locations, people or stories connected to your organization.

- Publish one or two posts each week using the campaign themes most relevant to your organization. Use a different example in each post and include a direct link whenever possible.

3. Dec 14 – 24: Final preparations and last-minute discovery

Help people complete the plans and purchases still on their lists. Content during this period should be especially timely, practical and easy to act on.

- Publish one practical reminder during the week of December 14 and one final post between December 21 and 24. Only promote products or services that remain available, and clearly identify any deadlines, locations or holiday hours.

Make the suggested posts your own

- Replace bracketed text with your organization's name, location, offer and link.
- Use one specific example rather than describing everything your organization does.
- Confirm products, services, locations, images and links before posting.
- Adapt the captions to your voice and audience.

A note on audience

The ultimate audience for the campaign is the everyday Canadian who wants to make good choices but does not have time to research every co-operative. They would rather support local and Canadian businesses, but co-ops can feel difficult to identify or access. The campaign should therefore be:

1. Concrete: show a real product, service, place, experience or resource.
2. Easy: give one clear action and one direct link.
3. Plain-language: avoid sector jargon and assume little prior knowledge.
4. Useful: help someone complete something already on their holiday list.
5. Inviting: encourage discovery without guilt or pressure.

6. Reinforcing: Ensure every post connects back to the bigger idea of why choosing co-op matters. Whether showcasing a product, service or experience, reinforce that choosing a co-operative means supporting businesses that put people and communities first. Every co-op choice is also a gift to a stronger, more resilient Canadian economy and community.

Why promote Find a Co-op map?

The map turns awareness into discovery and action

The Find a Co-op map makes the co-operative economy visible, searchable and local.

It shows breadth and depth: Find a Co-op helps people see that co-operatives, credit unions, caisses and mutuals are present across Canada and active in many parts of daily life.

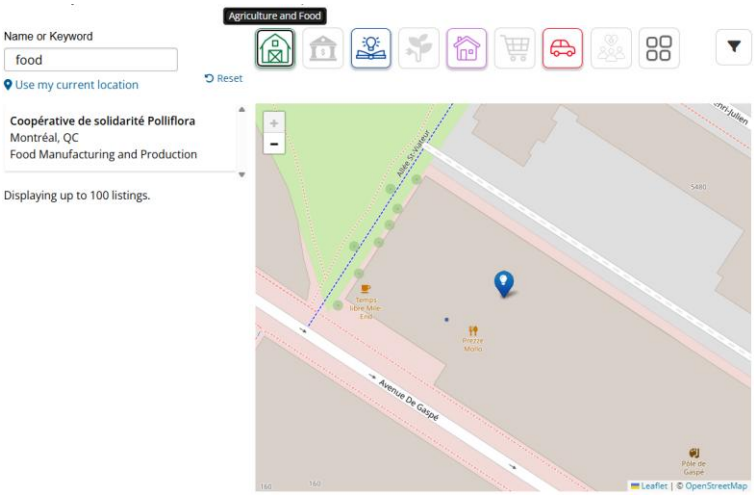

It helps people find co-ops in their community: the map gives someone a practical starting point instead of asking them to research the sector alone.

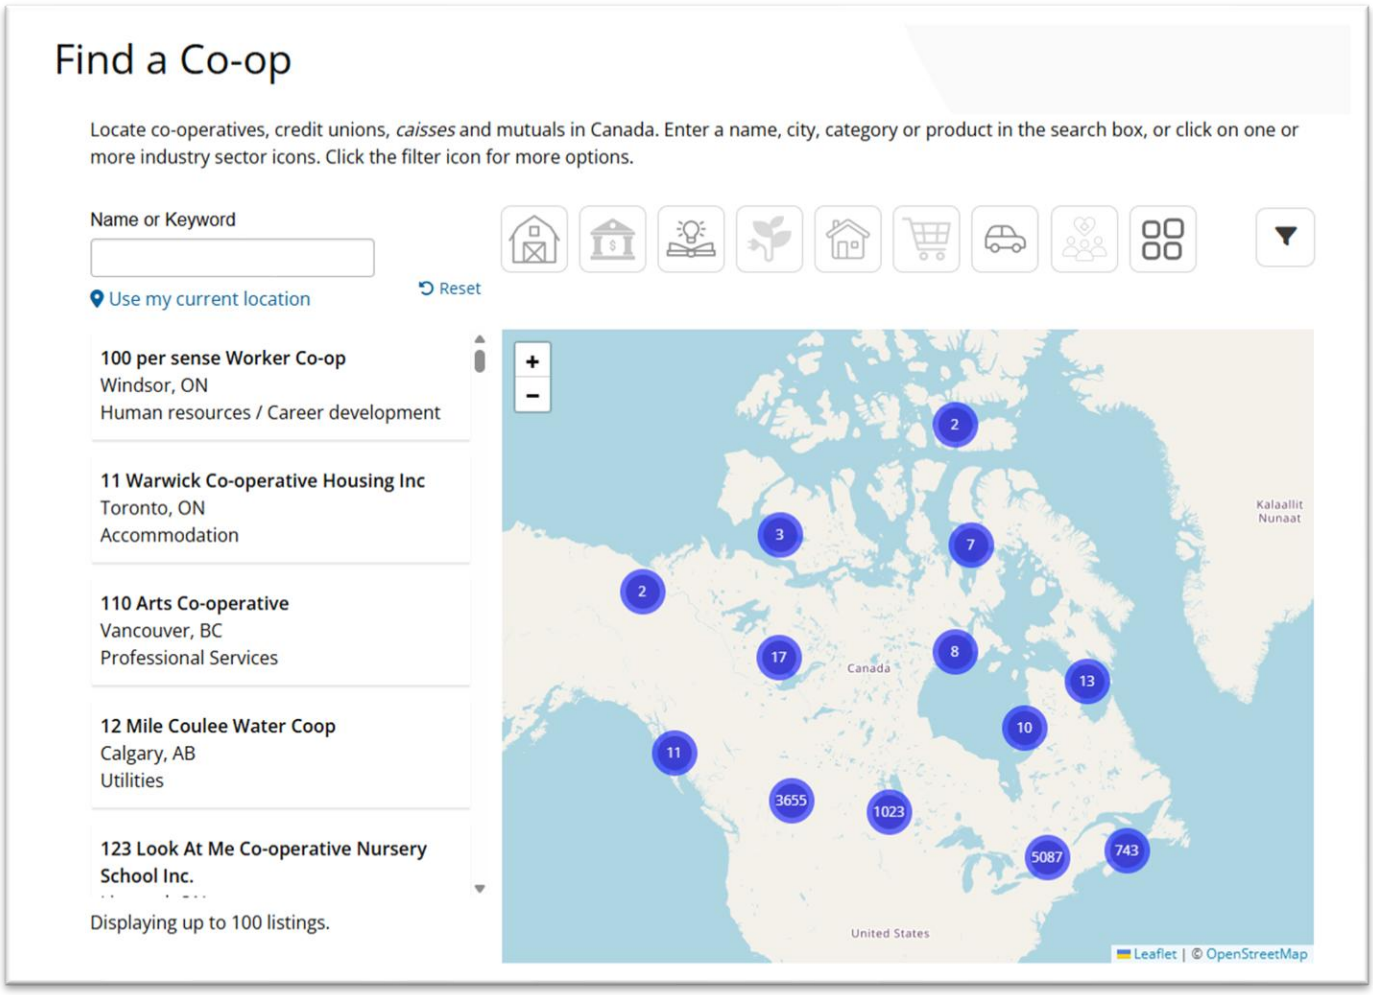

It can support growth and visibility: more people using and sharing the map can help more Canadians discover co-operative options.

It provides one shared call to action: members in different regions and sectors can all direct audiences to the same national discovery tool

How the map works

Search. Filter. Discover.
Find a Co-op is a searchable national database of co-operatives, credit unions, caisses and mutuals across Canada. Use the category filters to narrow what you are looking for and the map filters to focus on a particular area. Then explore the results to discover co-operative products, services and organizations near you.

Think of Find a Co-op as a searchable database, not just a map. Search, filter, zoom and explore to discover co-operative options that match what someone is looking for.

- Zoom in to explore a specific area
- Search by name or keyword
- Use the category filters
- se additional map filter
- Try “Use my current location”
- Combine search tools

Campaign idea

How much of your holiday list can you find at a co-op?

The campaign centers on choices someone may already be making during the holidays. It introduces is a simple possibility: some of those gifts, foods, experiences and services may be available through a co-op.

Campaign journey
FIND — Find a co-op near you.
CHOOSE — Choose co-op for something already on your list.
DISCOVER — Notice how co-ops are part of everyday life.

The Co-op Holiday Checklist

☐ Buy one gift from a co-op.
☐ Put a co-op product on your holiday table.
☐ Try a co-op you have never visited.
☐ Choose a co-op experience or practical service.
☐ Tell someone about a co-op you value.
☐ Use the Find a Co-op map to discover what is nearby.

Key messages

Choose local. Choose Canadian. Choose co-op.

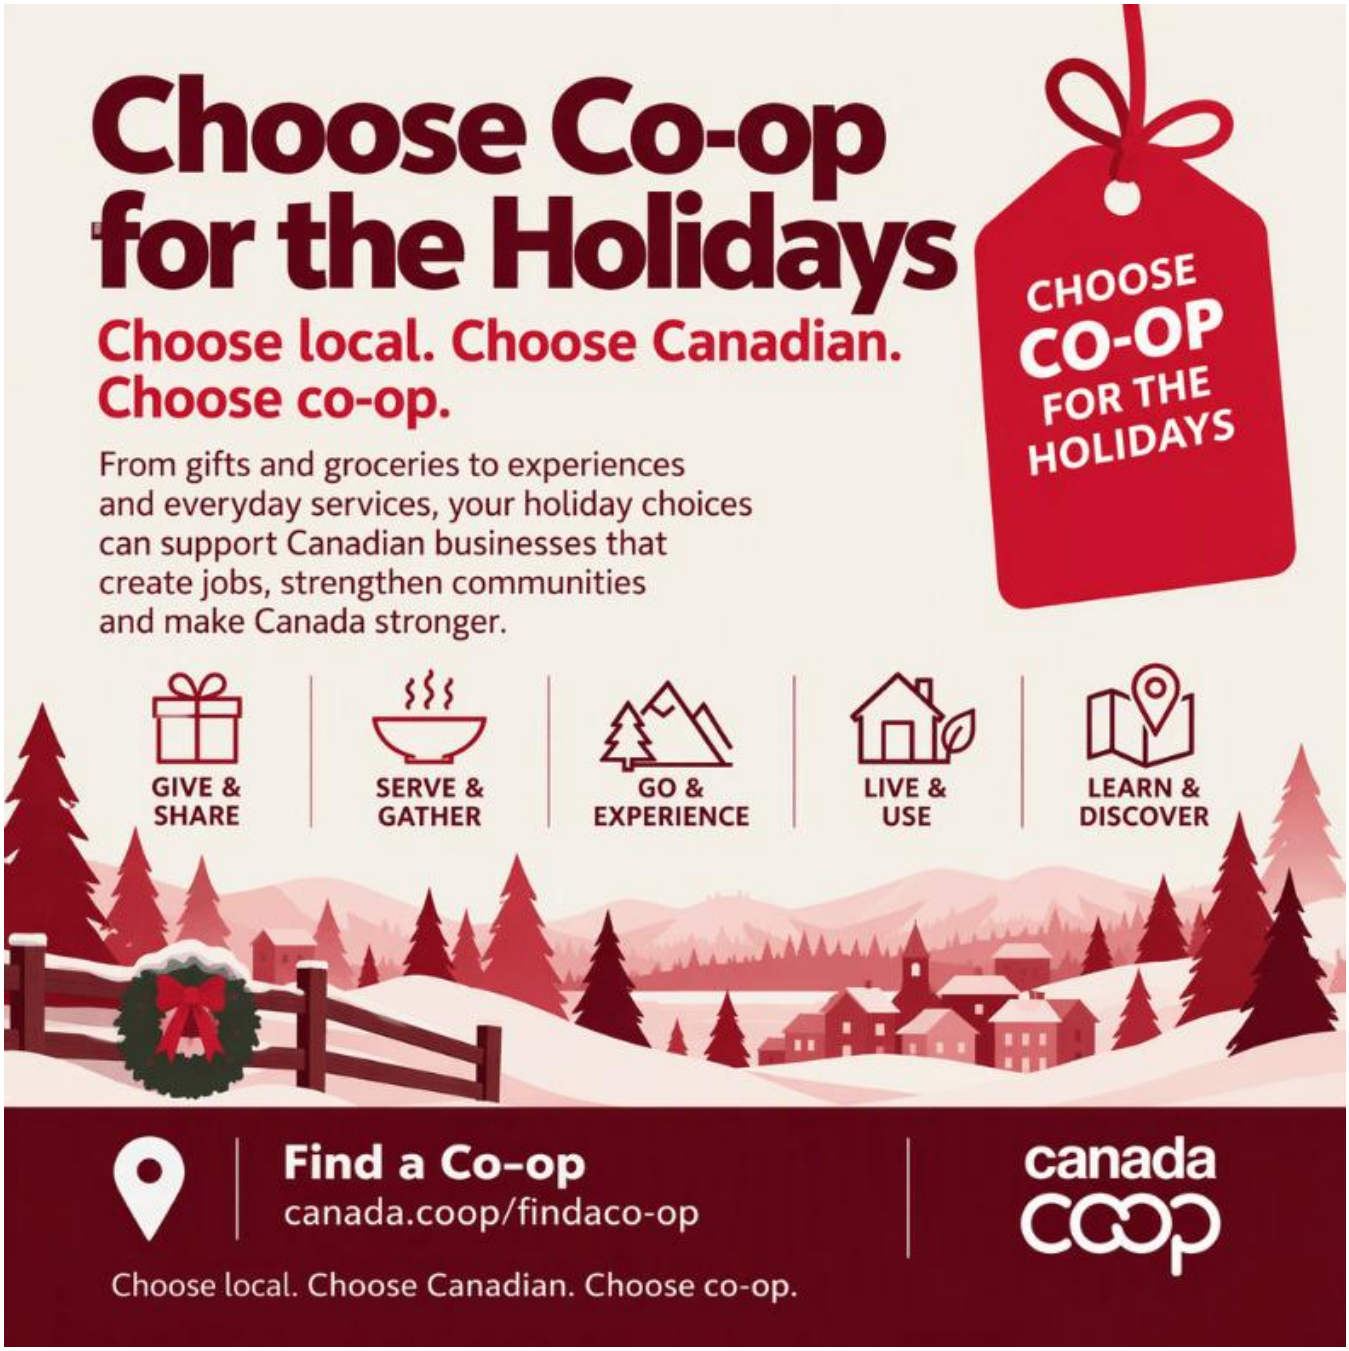

- When you choose co-op, you're not just giving something to someone on your list. You're supporting a better way of doing business and helping build stronger communities. That's a gift to all of us.
- From gifts and groceries to travel and everyday services, there may be more ways to choose co-op than you think.

- Find a Co-op helps Canadians discover co-operative options, including those close to home.

- You do not need to change everything. Start with one co-op to visit, try or learn about.
- Choosing co-op means better business and stronger communities.

Every member that shares the map helps make co-ops more visible. The main call to action is: Choose Co-op for the Holidays!

Social media content themes

Broad enough for every member; concrete enough for the everyday Canadian.

Theme 1: Give and share

Gifts, gift cards, experiences, memberships and useful recommendations.

Short-form post

There's something special about giving a gift with a local story behind it.

A favourite food. A handmade find. A cozy winter essential. A gift card or experience. Something you know they'll actually use.

This holiday season, add co-op to the places you look for inspiration. Choosing a co-op gift can support a Canadian business rooted in its community.

What if one of the gifts on your holiday list could come from a co-op?

Choosing a gift from a co-op means your holiday spending can also support a Canadian business rooted in its community. It's a small way to help build stronger local economies and a stronger Canada.

Co-ops across Canada offer products, gift cards, experiences and services that can make thoughtful holiday gifts. Depending on where you live, you might find locally produced food, artwork, books, clothing, outdoor supplies, an experience to enjoy together or a gift card that helps someone discover a new co-op.

This holiday season, we're inviting you to consider [INSERT SPECIFIC PRODUCT, GIFT CARD, EXPERIENCE OR GIFT IDEA].

It is one practical way to support a local co-operative that is connected to its members and community.
